15¢ OUR 63RD YEAR SIKESTON, SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1974 16 PAGES NUMBER 168

SeMo area outlined

Guy Jaffe, right, director of the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development, and Scott R. Allen, holding map, deputy director of the division, outline the Southeast Missouri area of assignment for Frank R. (Buzz) Sutherland, a new community development field representative. The three were in Sikeston today to get acquainted with community leaders and problems and to introduce Sutherland as the representative of the new Division of Community Development.

Wholesale prices zoom in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that wholesale prices increased by a whopping 3.9 per cent in August, raising the prospect that the nation's inflation is getting worse instead of better.

The increase was the second worst for any month in 28 years, exceeded only by a 6.2 per cent increase in August of last year after lifting of the government's freeze on prices.

Exploding prices ranged across almost the entire economy, with farm products and industrial commodities leading the way. The August increase works out to a staggering 46.8 per cent, if continued for a year.

Consumers could take no comfort that the big new surge in prices is at the wholesale level, since wholesale increases usually are quickly passed into retail prices, especially for food.

The big August increase also comes at a time when the Ford administration has suddenly stopped predicting there will be any significant decrease in the nation's inflation rate this year.

White House Economics Counselor Kenneth Rush told a newsman that the recent predictions that inflation might decline to about 8 per cent — from the current 11 per cent rate for consumer prices — probably will not be realized.

The August price rise followed an increase of 3.7 per cent in July. The Labor Department's Wholesale Price Index for August stood at 167.4 of the 1967 average and was 17.8 per cent higher than a year ago.

Translated into dollar figures, that meant that it cost $167.40 to purchase goods at wholesale that cost $100 in 1967.

All figures are adjusted to account for seasonal difference.

Detailing its price report, the Labor Department said agricultural products were up 7.6 per cent in August, following a rise of 6.4 per cent in July and a decline in each of the four preceding months.

Industrial commodities continued to rise rapidly in price and were up 2.5 per cent in August, a rate only slightly less than the average monthly increase of 2.7 per cent that has prevailed throughout most of the year.

Consumer finished goods, those products in the wholesale chain nearest retail outlets, rose two per cent.

Sharply higher prices for grains, livestock, oil seed and processed food and feeds accounted for much of the rise in agricultural prices last month. Processed foods and feeds were up 8.2 per cent while raw farm products rose 6.7 per cent to push over-all agricultural prices up 7.6 per cent at wholesale last month.

Shoppers can expect more price hikes ahead at supermarkets with the 3.2 per cent increase in consumer foods last month.

Consumer foods—those prepared for sale on grocery shelves—rose in price chiefly as a result of increases for meats, edible fats and oils, sugar products, processed poultry and eggs.

Some examples: meats, poultry and fish were up 1.5 per cent; processed fruits and vegetables were up 3.2 per cent; sugar products 9.6 per cent; animal fats and oils 23 per cent, and manufactured animal feeds 39 per cent.

Soaring prices for machinery and equipment, trucks, commercial furniture and railroad equipment accounted for the rise in producer finished goods.

Local officials ask why

75 companies looked, then bypassed Sikeston

About 75 companies have sent representatives to Sikeston this year to see if the city would make a good location for their business.

All 75 have bypassed the city, and at a meeting today with representatives of the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development, local officials wanted to know why.

Guy Jaffe, director of the CID Division, told the group one of the reasons he was in Sikeston today was to look at the city and see what can be done to help the city.

Jaffe; Scott Allen, deputy director of the CID; and Frank (Buz) Sutherland, community field representative for Southeast Missouri, sat in on a breakfast meeting with representatives of Sikeston, Miner, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce and the Scott County Court.

Many industrial representatives have been enthusiastic about locating in the city while they were here, but their firms later have located plants in other towns.

Allen said it is difficult to determine why an industry locates where it does. He said firms seldom tell what went into making their decision.

One possible reason suggested at the meeting was the lack of a building available for immediate occupancy.

The only building in Sikeston suitable for industry is the building formerly occupied by Anchor Toy Co. on East Malone Avenue. However, the building is old and doesn't meet the needs of most companies looking to settle here, Allen said.

He said Sikeston needs a new building with about 100,000 square feet.

He pointed out that attracting industry is a very competitive business, and to be competitive, a city must have a building available for a prospective firm.

Every industry that has moved into the Malden Industrial Park moved there because a building was available, Allen added.

Jaffe said the city's designation as an economic growth center is designed to help both the city and state economies. Sikeston is one of 13 cities in the state named a growth center.

Woman, 78 found dead in Hayti

HAYTI — An elderly Hayti woman apparently killed herself early Tuesday morning by hanging herself with a rope tied to the stairway railing in the hall of her home, Pemiscot County Sheriff Thad Shelly said today.

The body of Mrs. Bonnie Jennings, 78, was discovered by her sister- in- law, Mrs. J. V. Oates of Blytheville, Ark., who called the sheriff's office around 8:40 a.m. Tuesday, Shelly said.

Mrs. Jennings had called her sister- in- law the night before and said she wanted to talk. When Mrs. Oates arrived at the home, Mrs. Jennings apparently had been dead about an hour.

Pemiscot County Coroner Jimmy Dean said death occurred sometime between 7 and 8 a.m.

Mrs. Jennings had been sick for quite a few years, the sheriff said, and left a note pinned to her housecoat explaining that she had been sick and could no longer take the suffering.

The body was taken to Jimmy Osborn Funeral Home in Hayti, where services were conducted at 3 p.m. Wednesday with Dr. Don Anright officiating.

Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery at Hayti.

She is survived by one brother, J. V. Oates of Blytheville, and one nephew.

Officials seek identity of woman's skeleton

An investigation by two Cape Girardeau doctors has uncovered many facts about the parts of a skeleton discovered March 7 two miles east of Illmo by Larry Morrill of Scott City. Officials are now seeking to determine the identity of the person whose remains were found.

The skeleton, which was determined to be that of a white female about 5 feet 2 inches tall, was found on the Mississippi River bank 150 yards north of Old Grays Point, which was formerly a landing for the Thebes, Ill ferry.

Morrill, who discovered the remains, was in that vicinity March 7 with a metal detector and came across the grave. He uncovered it and found parts of a human skeleton. After reportedly deciding it was an old grave, Morrill returned home, but got to thinking about it.

He then contacted Ralph Hayes, chief of police at Scott City, who, with Morrill, contacted the Scott County sheriff's department.

Deputy Sheriff Dave Sanders, Hayes and Morrill returned to the site, placed the bones in a plastic bag and took them to the crime laboratory at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau for possible identification.

Dr. Robert B. Briner of Cape Girardeau, director of the Southeast Missouri Regional Crime Laboratory, studied the bones for approximately two months with the late Dr. Gerald Thompson, professor of anthropology at SeMo State.

The 80 bones recovered were cleaned and determined to be from a human skeleton (there are 206 bones in the human body). Most of the recovered bones were from the skull.

From their investigation it was determined that the remains were that of a white female who was born in 1906 and buried in 1966.

Mrs. Lowery is charged with shooting James Lowery in the head with a single shot from a .22- caliber revolver while he was in bed asleep.

She told the Scott County sheriff's department the shooting followed a lengthy family quarrel.

In another case Wednesday, an attorney was appointed to defend Joe Garrett of Bell City on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

Sentencing was deferred one year for Rouget Gerald Delisle of Portageville, Billy Wayne Gibson of Rock Spring, Wyo., and Tharon Kennedy of Allenville on possession of marijuana charges.

A preliminary hearing was set on Sept. 25 for Larry Eugene Berry of Scott City. Berry is charged with tampering with a motor vehicle.

Lewises denied bond

BLOOMFIELD— Bond was denied Melvin Leon Lewis, 27, and his 26- year old wife, Judith Lewis, when they appeared before magistrate Judge Koss Bloemeyer for arraignment on three charges each of assault by fire this morning.

The charges stem from the death of three of their children, Melvin Leon Jr., 7, Jody, 6, and Mark, 5, who died in a fire that destroyed their rural home Aug. 1, 1973 near Essex.

Judge Bloemeyer denied bond on the pair until after their preliminary hearing that was set for Sept. 24.

Also charged in the case is David Larue, 40, of Gray Ridge, who is presently an inmate at the Missouri Department of Correction in Jefferson City.

Attorney expects murder warrant to be withdrawn

CORINTH, Miss. (AP) — The attorney for a Corinth physician said Wednesday he was prepared to offer witnesses to prove his client was in Mississippi when his divorced wife was slain in Missouri.

Attorney John Hopkins said however, he expected Missouri authorities to withdraw their first degree murder warrant issued against Dr.Norman Garrison Jr.

The warrant was issued by Dunklin County, Mo., prosecuting attorney Charles Baker after the bloodstained body of Mrs. Lee Ann Garrison was found in her Kennett, Mo., home early Sunday.

Hopkins said the warrant was never served on Garrison, but was returned to Missouri after authorities completed a preliminary investigation Tuesday.

"We have witnesses who will testify that Dr. Garrison was not in the state of Missouri during the past weekend," Hopkins said. "We will present those witnesses should Garrison be arrested and the Missouri authorities should institute extradition proceedings."

Hopkins said the warrant was issued against Garrison "almost immediately following his former wife's death.

"It appears obvious to me that the warrant was prematurely issued in that the investigation is being made after issuing the warrant rather than prior. I believe the facts will bear this out."

Garrison was arrested by federal agents on a warrant

A WRONG CHOICE?

The prediction that it would not be long before President Gerald R. Ford would run into controversy came true sooner than expected. Whatever else one may say of his nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as Vice President of the United States, "controversial" is a word that fits.

Three times Mr. Rockefeller actively campaigned for the highest office of the land; and on all three occasions, his bid for the Presidency was rejected. Clearly, Mr. Rockefeller was not the choice of the people, and there is no evidence to show that they would choose him now.

Millions of Americans breathed sighs of relief when Gerald Ford became President, because he was and is clearly a "man of the people." Raised in moderate circumstances, Gerald Ford can understand and appreciate the problems and concerns of the wage-earning American. Mr. Rockefeller, a man of high character and noble motives, is totally unable to conceive of what it means to live as an "average" American — because average he is not. Born into the billions of dollars controlled by the Rockefeller financial empire, Nelson Rockefeller will never know what it means to budget the family food supply, or to eke out enough savings to take a vacation, or buy an extra lamp for the house.

As with many millionaires who have inherited their wealth, Mr. Rockefeller displays what is known as a "liberal" bent, with a leaning towards what is sometimes called "social justice" but what others fear might better be defined as "social-ism."

The Rockefellers control vast holdings in banking, industry, raw materials, international finance and other areas of world and national economy. Even Rockefeller himself confesses that he does not know how far or wide his empire extends. How Congress is going to separate Mr. Rockefeller from "conflict of interest" in his proposed government office is difficult to see. For example, how many millions of dollars borrowed by the United States Government to support deficit spending comes from Rockefeller banking interests? And how many millions of dollars in interest to those banks is extracted from the American taxpayer? How much Rockefeller money is loaned to finance trade with the U.S.S.R.? It may be argued that Mr. Rockefeller will not know how various government policies affect the Rockefeller fortune; but his four brothers, one of whom heads the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, with over $20 billion in deposits and hundreds of employees on his payroll, will know. In a way, Mr. Rockefeller is not an individual, but an institution.

The record of the three generations of the Rockefeller dynasty shows that what has been good for the Rockefellers has not necessarily been good for others. At one point, in the 1870's, the Rockefellers controlled 95 percent of all the oil refining in the United States — to the detriment of other refiners. During the ten year period of 1962 to 1972, and while Nelson Rockefeller was Governor of the State of New York, there was a net increase of one and a half million in manufacturing jobs in the USA. While Texas gained 237,000 jobs, North Carolina 205,000, Tennessee 156,000, California 148,000, and so on, New York State showed a net loss in manufacturing jobs of 233,200, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. Whatever his economic policies, they didn't work out well for working people in that State.

These and undoubtedly many other questions are bound to be raised during the confirmation hearings. One wonders why President Ford did not nominate a less vulnerable target for opponents to shoot at.

EMPLOYMENT TREND CONTINUES UPWARD

Recent employment declines, concentrated in industries heavily dependent on fuel, have been offset by coninued growth in other industries, according to Commissioner of Labor Statistics Julius Shiskin.

Claiming that current unemployment stems largely from energy shortages, Mr. Shiskin said that "the end of the oil embargo has set in motion forces which may reverse the decline in employment in the energy-critical industries."

A recent Bureau of Labor Statistics study of 172 private nonfarm industries shows that employment dropped 0.3 per cent in "energy-critical" industries compared with a growth of 0.4 percent in other industries from NOvember 1973 through March 1974.

"Energy-critical" industries were defined as those likely to experience negative effects of energy shortages. They comprised 44 of the 172 industries studied, and represent 35 percent of private nonfarm employment.

During the four months covered in the study, employment dropped by some 150,000 to 225,000 workers in the critical industries directly affected by petroleum shortages, particularly gasoline service stations and airlines.

And I don't want to play in the sand any more. Let's go in the water." The boy said, "I don't have a bathing suit." "Neither do I. So let's just take off our clothes." They did and went paddling in the water. Suddenly she looked at him and said, "I didn't know Catholics were so different from Protestants."

ACTION NOW

Our elected representatives profess total and undying devoting to the cause of protecting the consumer and the environment. The voters of the U.S. should scrutinize and judge most carefully the manner in which their interests in these two areas are being handled.

In December, 1971, two decisions were handed down by the U.S. Districk Court for the District of Columbia changing the rules for power plants being built to handle increased demand for electricity. The Court invoked the Refuse Act of 1899 to prevent new power plants from using waterways to cool their turbine generators before completion of a detailed environmental review under the provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act.

Mr. Shearon Harris, chairman of Edison Electric Institute and chairman and president of a major electric company. siad, "As a result of these two court decisions, the critical situation of lack of electrical capacity will continue to develop unless the Congress acts promptly." He warned, "that unless needed generating facilities are permitted to operate, a slowdown in the economy and an increase in unemployment could result from the substantial load curtailments which are possible under the circumstances visualized."

Unless corrective action is taken by Congress, millions of Americans will face the possibility of electric power failures and major blackouts of an extent and seriousness not previously experienced. Legislation permitting operation of newly completed generating facilities, while environmental impact studies are made, is urgently needed. Anything less will jeopardize the adequacy of the nation's vital supply of electric energy.

Estimates of capital demand, he said, range up to $3.3 trillion by 1985.

"Enormous sums of investment capital will be required to finance growth, to correct the scarcities of basic materials that are leaving great gaps in our industrial capabilities, and to maintain a competitive international economic posture in the decade ahead," Mr. Needham said in a speech at a luncheon meeting of the Financial Executives Institute.

THE FIGHT AGAINST COMMUNISM GOES ON

Far from all of the citizens of our country are beguiled by the so- called "spirit of detente." This year's seventh annual awards presentation dinner of the Council Against Communist Aggression in Washington highlighted the necessity for continuing the struggle against the greatest threat free men and Christians have ever faced.

The Council's first award was presented to Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina for his steadfast denial "that the dictators who rule China and Russia with an iron hand are deserving of our admiration and trust" and for being the only Senator to oppose the confirmation of Henry Kissinger as Secretary of State because of objections to his "policies toward the communist dictatorships."

In his speech accepting the award, Senator Helms singled out the U. S. press as "perhaps most responsible for the cavalier attitude about communism being promoted today" and warned that national broadcasting networks are spreading the "lax moral standards" of New York and Hollywood throughout our country.

In a powerful and moving statement, a young black warrant officer, Donald J. Rander, who had suffered five years as a prisoner of the North Vietnamese, reminded the audience that communists are never to be trusted and called for rededication to a united fight against this enemy. He was accepting an award on behalf of a fellow ex- prisoner of war in North Vietnam, Michael Berge.

Awards were also given to Herbert Romerstein, chief investigator of the minority staff of the House Committee on Internal Security, and to a number of other active anti-communists. It is good to know that these resolute patriots are still keeping up their fight. HLH

A GOODBY GERRY LETTER

Dear Gerry,

By the time you find this note I will be gone. I don't know how to tell you this, but the honeymoon is over. I guess I should have known it wouldn't last forever, but I didn't think it would end so soon.

How could you do it, Gerry? I believed everything you told me. We were so happy together, and I was so proud when people would point us out and giggle, "They're on their honeymoon."

What a glorious month we had. As far as I was concerned, you could do no wrong. I hung onto every word you said. After my bitter breakup with "you- know- who," I thought you were different. He lied to me and cheated on me and treated me like a fool.

I said I would never fall in love again. And then you came along with your honest face and strong- jaw and sincere smile and damned if my heart didn't go flip- flip.

I said to myself you were special. You knew right from wrong, and you would never be swayed by a lot of rhetoric and double talk. Gerry, you promised me you wouldn't do anything until justice took its course. You told me under the stars as we held hands that the long nightmare was over and we would love each other forever and ever.

Oh, Gerry, what made you change your mind? What happened to all those dreams you had for us?

I know you tried to explain it to me. You said you had to forgive "you- know- who" as an act of compassion because he had suffered enough. But he hasn't suffered half as much as we have, Gerry. We'll never know all the things he did to us. Even now he refuses to admit that he did anything wrong. He keeps talking about mistakes in judgment. They weren't mistakes in judgment, and you know it. They were criminal acts and you had no right to forgive him before we knew what they were.

I'm sorry I sound bitter, Gerry. I don't want to. I guess anyone who's been on a honeymoon and then discovers his mate is not a knight in shining armor would feel the same way.

Sunday, after you told me what you were going to do, I decided to go see Evel Knievel jump over the Snake River in his steam rocket. I thought this would make me forget. But it did just the opposite. As I stared at the red, white and blue Sky Cycle, I thought of us going off into space together.

I could see us flying across chasms and mountains sharing the danger and thrills that had been so much a part of our honeymoon.

But then as the rocket filled with hot air and the steam built up and the vehicle started lifting off the ramp, something happened. Before it got off, a parachute opened and, instead of streaking out across the canyon, the rocket nose- dived and floated head first, crash-landing on the rocky bank of the Snake River.

At that moment, Gerry, I broke into years. I wasn't crying for Evel-- I was crying for us. The rocket more than anything symbolized our honeymoon. It looked so beautiful on the pad with all that steam coming out of its nozzles, its nose pointed toward the sky as if to say, "Here I come world, ready or not."

The only trouble, Gerry, with Evel's rocket and your rocket on Sunday about "you-know- who" is that neither one of them would ever fly.--A.B.

P.S. Don't try to find me.

Why Ford Did It

WASHINGTON — Special WAtergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski would have sought an indictment against former President Nixon "in a matter of weeks," according to ources familiar with the plans, f President Ford hadn't ntervened with a pardon.

These sources say the special prosecutor intended to indict Nixon solely for obstruction of justice. Jaworski believed he had "an iron- clad case" against the former President and would get an "almost certain conviction," our sources report.

The case would have been based heavily upon Nixon's own tapes, which provide prima- facie evidence that he participated in the Watergate cover-up. Jaworski's deputy, James Neal, had already arranged for Secret Service technicians to testify about the taping system.

Our sources describe Jaworski as a man with a deep faith in the judicial processes. They say he simply could not ignore the verdict of the House Judiciary Committee, which voted unanimously to impeach Nixon for obstruction of justice, nor the will of the Watergate grand jury, which voted 19 to 0 to name him as an unindicted co- conspirator.

The grand jury would have indicted him last March if Jaworski had not counseled that a sitting President couldn't be legally indicted.

The threat of indictment hung over the former President like Damocles' sword. Sources who have had access to him in his seclusion at San Clemente describe him as "totally weary, terribly depressed and completely despondent."

One source has been struck by the "stark loneliness" of Richard Nixon. He is "absolutely alone within himself," the source explains. All sources agree that he has complete control of his faculties, although his conversation sometimes wonders and his nerves seem frayed.

Nixon's psyche is so "delicate," our sources report, that his loyal aide Ronald Ziegler and attorney Herbert "Jack" Miller took President Ford's representative, attorney Benton Becker, aside before putting him together with Nixon at San Clemente. They asked the judicious Becker to keep the meeting informal.

Becker refused to comment on the meeting, except to say he found Nixon "alert" and "cordial."

The main cause of Nixon's anguish, according to our sources, was the expectation that Jaworski would ask the grand jury to indict him. The distraught Nixon even developed a strange inability to repeat Jaworski's name.

In a phone conversation with Rep. Dan Kuykendall, R-Tenn., for example, the former President mumbled: "We've got problems with that fellow ... uh ... uh ..."

"Jaworski?" suggested Kuykendall.

"Yes," said Nixon.

Others have also reported that he seems to have trouble with the special prosecutor's name.

We have established that President Ford learned of Nixon's mental state and imminent indictment. White House sources say the President feared the indictment could cause his predecessor a nervous breakdown.

Here are the other reasons, which finally persuaded the President to move quickly to grant Nixon a "full, free and absolute" pardon:

-- Ford's legal advisers, Philip Buchen and Benton Becker, determined that a pardon was the President's prerogative and had nothing to do with equal justice. Lyndon Johnson granted less than 200 pardons during his five years in the White House, for example, while Harry Truman issued about 200 pardons a year. People have been pardoned for crimes that kept others in prison. Buchen and Becker advised Ford, therefore, that the Nixon pardon would not affect the criminal cases against H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, John Mitchell and the other alleged conspirators.

-- The President's lawyers came up with a quote from Alexander Hamilton who, writing in The Federalist, declared: "There are critical moments when a well- timed offer of pardon to the insurgents or rebels may restore the tranquility of the commonwealth." Under the preamble to the Constitution, the lawyers noted, the President is required to "insure the domestic tranquility." Ford agreed that a pardon, in Nixon's case, would promote tranquility.

-- Buchen and Becker also contended there was no evidence Nixon had advance knowledge of the Watergate break- in. He was guilty merely of covering it up in order to avoid political embarrassment in the middle of the 1971 presidential campaign. What started out to be a political move wound up as a criminal conspiracy. The lawyers quoted from Sir Walter Scott's famous line, "Oh, what tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive!" Ford agreed that his predecessor hadn't started out to commit a crime but merely had become entangled in one.

-- The President and his advisers also took into account Nixon's 28 years of political service, the last 24 under a national microscope. As one aide mused, "This is a terrible way to go after such long service."

Inside Labor

by Victor Riesel

Labor Develops New Electronic 'Path' Strategy To Elect a 'People's Congress'

WASHINGTON--- Just the other day in his office (The Eighth Floor) across from the White House, labor chief George Meany said that the AFL- CIO has more political "clout" than ever in its history. And this is the result of having "a very, very effective political organization...we do have a machine...that reaches into the precincts of every industrial state in this country."

And when Meany, labor's chief of chiefs, says it's a machine, he certainly means it. I do believe it never has been matched in political history. During the next weeks, it will run the most electronicized election campaign any free nation ever has known.

According to a confidential packet of documents and two huge folding charts prepared for a special closed conference of COPE's Operating Committee (made available to me) labor's political- action strategists have developed new techniques under a hitherto unreported name and formula known by the code CPM.

The procedure, using computers all the way, is intended to saturate every state in a short time, reach down to every single union member, get his registration record, match it with the party in which he registered, if he did; determine whether he voted or not, print out his telephone number and union relationship-- and electronically give the Committee on Political Education directors access to every unionized working- class home in the land.

This futuristic politicking is called "the AFL- CIO National COPE Critical Path Method political procedures program."

In effect, it couples an electronically computerized "network" with hand- card selection, merging of political units, special budgeting of money and manpower in state after state. At least 13 states already are geared for action. They have deadlines for getting their members registered. They have alerts for unions and political action committees to tell them they are behind in view of primaries or the actual November balloting.

To describe the CPM's intricacies, the chart, the arrows and interlocking "boxes" and list erch state would take several columns.

Today this "Critical Path Method" (CPM) is aimed at the November elections. It has devised its own enemies list in marginal states and regions. It appears to be able to forecast victories and defeats. For example, Meany said that noontime in his office that he would not (repeat not) be "greatly surprised" to lose to the Republicans the old Jerry Ford Grand Rapids, Mich., Fifth and the Ohio First Congressional Districts in the Cincinnati area this November.

Though the Path operation no longer calls for a "Veto-Proof Congress," it hasn't changed its objectives. Now it is driving for a "People's Congress" or "a pro- People Congress." There is no difference.

Point is to be able to override President Ford on labor's bills or those it supports. As a wise political scientist, Meany isn't tackling the President head- on in this campaign. For the labor chief it would be senseless. Eventually he may need the President politically. Meany and most of labor may find themselves unable to take the Democratic presidential nominee in 1976. And Meany already has indicated he believes that Sen. Ted Kennedy, were he nominated, would be defeated because of Chappaquiddick.

As for Sen. Scoop Jackson, those around Meany believe the Washingtonian has sacrificed much of the AFL-CIO support with his championing of Peking over Taiwan. And, says one close friend of Meany's, "Jackson is dead politically anyway. I believe George believes Jackson can't get off the ground, so why stay with a loser?"

So the COPE line now, according to the documents before me, is to say we'll support the new President and fight him only when we have to, but his conservative record discloses he'll not back our bills, so we need a people's Congress to override him when necessary.

But no disrespect is shown for the President. Part of the strategy is to campaign in each district where possible by saying such and such a Republican candidate is "Nixon's man."

And Path certainly can get into each district. As Meany said:

"We've a computerized voting registration list that reaches right down to the grass roots of our own membership."

As for financing, Meany, when asked about contributions to COPE, replied the money is "bigger than ever...Our voluntary contributions are up. I don't have the figures, but we did have a report the other day. We had a meeting of the Operating Committee of COPE (Aug. 26-28, as first revealed here-- VR) and we went down the line, and it was a plus all the way."

It was at this Operating Committee conference, attended by Meany personally, that the intricate Path packet was unveiled. Little was overlooked at the sessions. Representatives of organizations of youth, retirees, blacks and those of Latin- American descent, and women, as well as of labor, reported and participated actively. But the Critical Path Method electronic network chart was the most fascinating innovation created for the 1974 elections. Especially in the marginal district program section.

The Path electronically lights up the way to a People's Congress.

Ann Landers

Ann observes treatment by acupuncture in China

Your Problem Girl is writing from behind the Bamboo Curtain, a member of the American Medical Association's delegation traveling through mainland China.

We are visiting Shanghai's largest hospital, where 2,000 outpatients are treated daily--about 500 with acupuncture. These people are not being operated on. They are receiving needles for everything from stuttering to bed- wetting to arthritis and cancer. After visiting hospitals in Peking, Shenyang, Darlien, and Tientsin, I've seen enough acupuncture so that I could set up a clinic and insert the needles personally. (If I lived in Nevada, it would be perfectly legal for me to do so. Heaven help us if other states pass such legislation!)

Dr. Don Wood, internist of Indianapolis, and Dr. Claude Welch, Harvard Prof. of Surgery and President of the American College of Surgeons, were busily photographing the acupuncture patients. Fourteen procedures were in progress in a single room. We were first shown a toddler with six needles protruding from his forehead. "He was brain-damaged at birth," the doctor said. His mother proudly boasted, "My son can walk a few steps now. When we carried him in he could barely move his little legs."

A nine- year- old girl was lying flat on her back with one needle in her lower abdomen and two needles in her ankles. "Frequent urination is her problem," the nurse told our urologists, Dr. Charles Hoffman of Huntington, W. Va., and Dr. Russell Roth of Erie, Penn. (both past presidents of A.M.A.). They winced.

A pretty 11- year- old child with epilepsy sat quietly with two needles in her elbows as we watched a nurse jab a third needle into her neck. "Does it hurt?" I asked. "No," she smiled. "It is making me well."

Dr. Jay Arena, the famous pediatrician from Duke University, asked if the child was receiving any medication. (He thought she might be getting Dilantin, a drug which has proven very effective.) "No," was the reply. "She is doing well."

Dr. Kenneth Sawyer of Denver called my attention to a plumpish, middle- aged woman who sat quietly with two needles sticking out of her face, one at the corner of each eye. "Glaucoma," he said, as he reached for his camera. "I've got to get a picture of this one."

The most startling sight was a man in his mid- 50s, lying face down. He looked like a human porcupine with at least 30 needles protruding from his back and buttocks. Some of the needles were 12 inches long. "Arthritis," explained the doctor. "He will feel much better soon." Dr. James Sammons, Executive Vice President- Designate of the A.M.A., whispered to me, "No doubt. Just getting those damn needles out would help a lot."

As we left the ward, the patients applauded-- their customary manner of greeting foreign visitors and bidding them farewell. Joe Miller, A.M.A. staff member from Chicago, noted that not a single patient showed signs of discomfort. Moreover, they all seemed confident that the acupuncture treatments were helping.

At dinner that evening, our delegation discussed what we had seen. Dr. Malcolm Todd of Long Beach, Calif. (President of the A.M.A.) summed it up: "Acupuncture has been used for centuries to treat a wide range of complaints, but there is no scientific evidence that it has much value as a cure."

Dr. Richard Palmer, pathologist from Alexandria, Va., added, "Unfortunately, when people are in pain they'll try anything. We must make sure that acupuncture doesn't become quackupuncture. It must be regarded in the Western world as experimental and used only by licensed physicians, dentists, and research scientists." To which I added, "Amen, brothers."

Olivette to honor Brock

OLIVETTE, Mo. (AP) — Lou Brock's hometown of Olivette is planning a special day to honor the St. Louis Cardinal speedster.

Brock stole two bases last night at Busch Stadium, setting a major league season record of 105 and a National League career mark of 738.

And while the fleet outfielder was performing his base stealing heroics, the Olivette city council approved a resolution to honor him -- for his volunteer work in the community as well as his baseball feats.

Officials say they will try to hold the ceremonies on a Sunday in October.

SPORTS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Spirits of St. Louis have announced a tentative agreement to sign James "Fly" Williams, former Austin Peay basketball star.

TWENTY YEARS LATER THE SPIRIT is just as strong as when Al Kaline began his big league career. The Detroit outfielder, who began his career with the Tigers in 1953, was recently awarded the "Mr. Enthusiasm" award by a Michigan booster club.

Correction

Socialist party will not have candidate on election ballot

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Socialist Workers party will not have a U.S. Senate candidate on the November election ballot in Missouri as the result of a state Supreme Court decision reaffirming the court's position that petition signers must be registered voters.

The court on July 22 ruled that signers of initiative and referendum petitions had to be registered voters.

Wednesday, the court denied a motion to rehear that case, but withdrew the decision and rewrote it to clarify the basis for its original order.

In addition, the court ruled that signers of petitions to get new political parties on the ballot must also be registered.

Losing the case was Barbara Mutnick, 29-year-old Socialist Workers' party candidate who was left off the ballot by Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick because only 6,722 of the signatures on her petitions were those of registered voters. She needed signatures of 17,844 registered voters.

"The decision makes it clear these is only one class of voters in the Missouri electoral system—registered voters—and the petition process is very much a part of that electoral system," Kirkpatrick said.

"Registration records are a valuable tool in canvassing petitions," he said. "With the help of county clerks and election boards, this year we were able to make the most thorough check of petitions this office has ever made.

"Limiting petition signing to registered voters is obviously not too severe a requirement, since one petition effort complied fully, winning a place on the ballot."

In both 6-1 decisions, Judge Robert Seiler dissented.

Mrs. Mutnick's attorneys contended the Constitution requires only that signatures be obtained from qualified voters, and that a person can be a qualified voter without registering, which they said was only a regulation pertaining to actually casting a ballot.

Judge Lawrence Holman quoted from an 1878 Supreme Court decision in a simular case in which the court said voter registration "was the final, qualifying act, and no matter if a citizen possessed every other qualification, if not registered, he was not a qualified voter."

Holman wrote the majority opinion.

The court has refused to consider an amendment by Sen. Donald Gralike, D-St. Louis, to the 1973 statewide voter registration law, in its decisions on petition signers.

However, Kirkpatrick based his position on the amendment, which said, "Whenever the word voter is used in the laws of this state, it shall mean registered, or legal voter."

Seiler said the decision placed registration requirements "upon statutes which do not deal with voting at all, but pertain exclusively to the signing of petitions."

He maintained that to require registration as a prerequisite to signing of petitions, the state constitutional requirement on petitions, or state laws on petitions, would have to be changed.

Mrs. Mutnick sais she will run as a write-in candidate.

In the revision of its decision on initiative and referendum petitions, the majority opinion said state law says any person may sign an initiative petition who is a qualified voter and who at the time it is presented to him is legally entitled to vote on the measure it proposes.

A person is legally entitled to vote when he meets the constitutional age and residency requirements and when he satisfies the requirements of state laws on voting, the opinion said.

Motor disability program begins

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Southeast Missouri Research Association for Specific Perceptual Motor Disabilities, Inc. began its fall program Saturday at the Hawthorne School.

The highly structured program, developed by Dr. Charles Shedd, Roading Reserarch Foundation, Lafayette, La., will meet from 7:45 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. each Saturday, with classes in auditory, reading, math, social values and motor skills.

The pupils are taught on a one-pupil, one-tutor basis, with each pupil working at his own rate of speed. The association was instituted in September 1973 for children with a learning disability, dyslexia and hyperactivity. The child must have an average or better intelligence with a breakdown in learning one or more subjects in a normal classroom.

The program began with an enrollment of eight and presently has an enrollment of 57. The students come from as far north as St. Genevieve, as far south as Sikeston and from West Frankfort, Ill.

The past six months of testing showed an overall average gain in reading of two year six month. Testings ranged from one month to three years eight months.

Testing will be held again in mid-October.

For information on the program, contact Janice Meyr, P.C. Box 756, Cape Girardeau, Mo. 63701.

Anyone is welcome to visit and observe the classes on Saturday mornings.

Highway bill includes set speed limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nationwide highway speed limit would be set permanently at 55 miles per hour under a measure given 85-0 approval by the Senate.

The speed-limit provision was part of a highway bill okayed by the Senate on Wednesday and sent to the House.

The provision would make permanent a temporary 55 m.p.h. limit that was enacted in the midst of the energy crisis last winter but which is to expire June 30, 1975.

As in the temporary measure, the permanent limit would be enforced by cutting off federal highway aid to states that refused to set their limits at 55 m.p.h. or lower. Advocates said the reduced speeds have resulted in large savings of lives and gasoline.

The bill also would increase from 73,280 to 80,000 pounds the maximum allowable weight for vehicles on the Interstate highway system. Supporters said it would lead to more economical trucking operations, while the American Automobile Association denounced it as a hazard to motorists.

The Senate also went on record in favor of killing a requirement that cars be equipped with an interlock system to prevent them from starting before seat belts are fastened.

Senators adopted that amendment, 64 to 21, but the sponsors, Sens. James L. Buckley, Con-R-N.Y., and Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., then withdrew it.

The sponsors explained that elimination of the interlock devices, which became mandatory with 1974-model cars, was being considered in other legislation now in a Senate-House conference. But they said the vote showed the Senate's sentiment on the matter.

What's the law?

The case of the teeny crime

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Wilbur was so law- abiding he'd all but break out into a sprint whenever he saw a "No Loitering" sign. Consequently, he couldn't quite figure out where he'd gone wrong when a motorcycle cop flagged him down, on a hot and dry deserted highway and gave him a ticket for speeding.

Actually, it developed in court, bewildered Wilbur hadn't gone all that far wrong. The cop had ticketed him for going only 1 m.p.h. over the speed limit.

"I believe in law and order," Wilbur told the judge, "but I don't believe in that cop. He can't be for real. To give a man a ticket for going one measerly m.p.h. over the speed limit is an outrage. And, certainly, a person can't be convicted of such a teeny offense."

"Whether a man robs a big bank or a small one," responded the police officer, "it's still robbery. And whether a man exceeds the speed limit by one m.p.h. or 50 m.p.h., it's still speeding. Consequently, Wilbur's guilty and he's got to be punished."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict speeding Wilbur of breaking the law?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that considering that the road was dry and no other vehicles were in the area, Wilbur's exceeding the speed limit by one m.p.h. was not so unreasonable as to warrant his conviction.

Oil exporting countries hold on to surplus money

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The petroleum exporting countries are doling out money as carefully as they did oil during the embargo, but there are signs the United States won't get cut off this time.

The oil exporting nations made billions of dollars from the four-fold increase in petroleum prices and, in most cases, their economies can absorb but a fraction of the earnings. Most are holding on to surplus revenues, putting it in a safe and ready sugar bowl: short-term bank desposits of no more than 90 days.

But some money is going to help the less developed nations and to purchase arms. Small amounts are being spent on real estate and business investments.

The United States government and American businessmen have been seeking a share of the oil money. Last weekend, there was an indication of partial success: financial sources said that Saudi Arabia had decided to purchase several billion dollars of a special bond issue by the U.S. Treasury.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon visited the Mideast this summer, trying to convince Saudia Arabia and Kuwait to buy a large quantity of the special treasury bonds. He proposed that Saudi Arabia buy "well in excess of $5 billion."

The exact amount and terms of the Saudi Arabian purchase have not been decided on, but a Saudi financial official said the figure would be less than Simon wanted.

In addition to the special bond deal, Treasury officials say that oil producing countries have bought the bulk of between $4 billion and $5 billion worth of other Treasury and government securities sold to foreign countries this year.

By the end of this year, the 10 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are expected to have $60 billion more than they need. The World Bank calculated that the surplus would grow to more than a trillion dollars by 1985. That's almost 10 times the amount the United States has invested abroad.

The non-Arab countries — Iran, Venezuela, Indonesia and Nigeria — have larger populations or more sophisticated economies which can soak up most of their money. Even those countries will have excess cash for temporary investments while they wait for projects to come off the drawing boards.

Where is oil money going?

Bankers, realtors and others in the financial community are reluctant to talk for attribution. They say they are afraid that pending deals could fall through and possible future transactions might be jeopardized. Some pieces can be put together. Among them:

—An offer from Kuwait to pay almost $250 million for the St. Martin's Property Corp., a British real estate group. Kuwait already owns 8 per cent of the company.

—An half-interest by the Kuwait Investment Co. in a $100 million Atlanta hotel-commercial complex.

—The purchase by the Kuwait Investment Co. of Kiawah Island off the South Carolina coast for $17.4 million.

—An offer from Iran to loan money to Grumman Corp. to assure production of the F14 Navy fighter plane.

—The purchase by Iran of $3.5 billion worth of U.S. military equipment and $4 billion worth of French industrial goods.

—The purchase by Iran of 25 per cent of the steel subsidary of West Germany's Krupp industrial enterprise for $100 million.

London bankers said that large amounts of oil money in short-term bank deposits had been withdrawn from Great Britain and shifted to New York because of the weak British economy. They declined to give figures.

New York financial experts also refused to provide many specifics. But the New York Federal Reserve Bank, which compiles figures on the holdings of the 12 largest New York banks, said the oil countries were responsible for a recent $300 million increase in the time deposits that the banks hold for foreign nations.

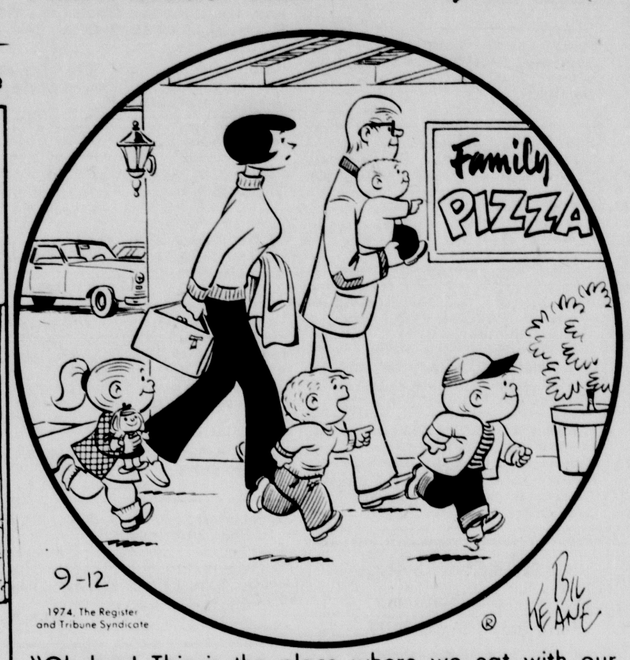
THE FAMILY CIRCUS — By Bil Keane



"Oh boy! This is the place where we eat with our hands!"

Today in U. S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, Sept. 12, the 255th day of 1974. There are 110 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1944, the first American troops reached German soil in the 2nd World War.

On this date —

In 1814, American forces successfully defended Baltimore against the British in the war of 1812.

In 1869, the National Prohibition Party was organized in Chicago.

In 1943, during World War II, dictator Benito Mussolini was rescued by German paratroopers from a hotel in Lake Bracciano, Italy, where he was being held prisoner by the Italian government.

In 1945, Gen. Douglas MacArthur had the secret Black Dragon society dissolved in Japan and many of its leaders were arrested.

In 1953, Massachusetts Sen. John Kennedy married Jacqueline Lee Bouvier in Newport, R.I.

In 1970, Palestinian guerrillas blew up three hijacked airliners on the Jordan desert.

Ten years ago: Dissident army officers tried, unsuccessfully, to overthrow the government of South Vietnam.

Five years ago: President Nixon ordered a resumption of bombing missions in the Vietnam war because, the White House said, the Communist side did not intend to scale down the war.

One year ago: Marjorie Merriweather Post, one of the world's wealthiest women, died at the age of 86.

Today's birthdays: Former Olympic track star Jesse Owens is 61 years old. Publisher Alfred A. Knopf is 82.

Thought for today: I'm against a homogenized society because I want the cream to rise — Poet Robert Frost.

Fruits and vegetables, as they ripen, tend to increase in water content. An apple seed, only 10 per cent water, will produce a ripe apple that is 80 per cent water. A ripe pineapple is 87 per cent water, a tomato is 95 per cent, and a watermelon is 97 per cent water.

On the other hand, a herring is 67 per cent water, a chicken 75 per cent, a frog 78 per cent, a lobster 79 per cent, an earthworm 80 per cent, and man has 70 per cent of his body weight in water.

Water is as vital as the air we breathe, yet we are careless with it. We pollute and waste it. By the time it reaches our homes, it contains every chemical and compound known to man. It is no longer the clean, fresh water that forms in the clouds.

Enjoy the best — try refined water. It's like drinking from a fresh mountain stream. For a home demonstration call Braswell.

The program is designed to make it easier to channel state aid to the city and promote its economic growth.

As the growth centers expand, they will help the surrounding area expand, Jaffe stated.

He said the concept of economic growth centers came about after the state discovered there was no plan for state development. "The ones who screamed the loudest got the most money," he said.

He said the program is designed to channel limited state resources into the areas where they will do the most good.

"The personal inputs we receive from community leaders and other information we gain from tours such as this will give us the kind of guidance we need to make sound decisions as to how our economic development efforts on the state level should be directed for maximum benefit to all Missouri communities," Jaffe said.

Sutherland, a former Charleston resident, is the CID Division's new full-time community development field representative for Southeast Missouri.

"Buz's job will be to represent the division of community development and explain its community development assistance programs," Jaffe said. "He will work closely with local leaders in this area to assist them in reaching community goals."

Sutherland said he was pleased with his new assignment to Southeast Missouri because it would allow him to carry on his community development work in the area where he grew up. Previously, he worked as a community betterment specialist in Southwest Missouri.

charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. He appeared before U.S. Magistrate William P. Dodson Monday night was freed on $10,000 bond.

Hopkins said the Missouri authorities had initiated the FBI action by informing a U.S. attorney in St. Louis that they feared the physician would attempt to leave Mississippi.

"This was totally untrue," Hopkins said. "There are two dozen witnesses who will testify he was never far away from his residence. They could not conceivably be any plausable reason why Missouri authorities felt this was necessary.

"They did not have the evidence to arrest Dr. Garrison but they wanted to confine him to Mississippi, have him in custody, so they could interrogate him."

Hopkins said Missouri authorities joined state and local officers and conducted "a thorough investigation in Corinth ending late Tuesday afternoon."

Authorities in Kennett said Mrs. Garrison, 32, was beaten with a blunt instrument then shot once in the head. They said her body was discovered by her teen-age daughter.

The Garrison were divorced in June and their three children had been living with their father.

Garrison was facing contempt of court charges in Dunklin Court for alleged nonpayment of alimony and failure to return the children to Mrs. Garrison in July as required by the divorce ruling. Mrs. Garrison was awarded $10,000 in alimony by the divorce court.

Lions dedicated to serving humanity

M. G. Lorberg

Lionism means asking what the local community needs that the Lions Club can provide -- and then working to provide it, Lions District Gov. M. G. Lorberg Jr. of Cape Girardeau told Sikeston Lions Club members at a special meeting Wednesday night at Sikeston Country Club.

Lorberg is head of the department of speech at Southeast Missouri State University and governor of District 26 D which comprises most of Southeast Missouri.

Lorberg said World Lions Service Day is coming up in October and each club throughout the world will be asked to "do something for humanity that day." He suggested that Lions could collect old eye glasses or eye donor cards.

Imagine the impact, he told the club, if all Lions spent part of the day in service to the community. Lions International is the largest service club in the world, Lorberg said, including 17,000 Lions in Missouri.

Lions International is well known for its work in the area of sight conservation.

The Sikeston club membership of 41 is slightly larger than the average club, Lorberg said, but could be larger. He pointed out that Kennett has a club with 100 members.

He suggested that the club needs to recruit younger members and give them a say in running the club. Too often the older members do everything, he said.

Lorberg said the state club would again sponsor a Missouri Lions band to perform at the next international convention to be held in Dallas.

The Missouri clubs sponsored a band this summer at the international convention in San Francisco.

Kansas City lawyer named bar president

Arthur H. Stroup

ST. LOUIS- Arthur H. Stoup, a Kansas City attorney, was named president of The Missouri Bar at the 95th annual meeting of the organization which began Wednesday at Stouffer's Riverfront Inn.

He succeeds Robert L. Hawkins Jr. of Jefferson City as president of the 9,000-member organization of Missouri lawyers and judges.

Stoup is senior partner in the Kansas City law firm of Stoup and Bohm. He is a past president of the Kansas City Bar Association and has served as a member of the board of governors of The Missouri Bar since 1967. He is also a member of the Lawyers Association of Kansas City, Missouri Association of Trial Attorneys and American Bar Association.

The new bar president received his degree from University of Missouri- Kansas City and served as an instructor in its department of history and political science prior to receiving his law degree from the UMKC School of Law. He was admitted to the Bar in 1950.

In addition to his many activities in legal organizations, Stoup is active in civic affairs. He is a past president of the Ward Parkway Optimist Club (1961- 1962) and served as Distinguished Lt. Governor of Optimist International, Missouri District (1963- 1964). He is a member of the board of governors of the Florence Crittenton Home and the Missouri Republican Club and the board of trustees of the Law Foundation of University of Missouri- Kansas City.

Prior to his election as president, Stoup served as vice president of The Missouri Bar in 1972- 73 and as president-elect in 1973- 74.

William J. Tate, a St. Louis attorney, succeeded Stoup in the office of president elect, and Thomas D. Cochran of St. Louis was named to succeed Tate as vice president.

Board members elected to serve as members of the executive committee for one-year terms were: Don Mason of Kansas City, Robert Hetlage of St. Louis, David Donnelly of Lebanon, Wade F. Baker of Jefferson City, Robert L. Hawkins Jr. of Jefferson City, the immediate past president, and the three new officers.

Officer foils burglary

HAYTI-- An off- duty Sikeston police officer foiled three would- be burglars at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday by interrupting their attempt to burglarize the Federal Compress and Warehouse Co. offices in Hayti.

Robert Parr, the Sikeston policeman, noticed three male youths inside the offices while walking down the street and called the Pemiscot County Sheriff's office, which contacted Hayti police.

Parr held the youths— aged 15, 16 and 17— in the offices until Hayti police officers Bill Hopkins and Ed Hendrix arrived and made the actual arrests.

The boys were turned over to the Pemiscot County juvenile officer.

Guard to test for pollution

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri National Guard, in conjunction with the state Department of Natural Resources and the Federal Environment Protection Agency, will begin sampling seven lakes in southern Missouri to determine chemical pollution content, state and federal officials jointly announced today.

The year-long sampling program, set to begin this weekend, is aimed at determining the extent of phosphate and nitrate deterioration in water quality of the lakes, Robert R. Payne of the EPA told newsmen.

About 75 guardsmen, working on a weekend volunteer basis, will take monthly samples from 59 tributaries of the Clearwater Reservoir, Pomme de Terre Reservoir, Stockton Reservoir, Table Rock Reservoir, Lake Taneycomo, Thomas Hill Reservoir and Lake Wappapello.

The EPA, Payne said, already has taken three samples from the main lake areas, beginning last March, and will take a final sample next month.

Following the collection of the water samples and their analysis Payne said the state will be provided with the findings upon which it can base application for federal assistance.

National Guard units from Springfield, Monett, Fredericktown, Poplar Bluff, Moberly and Kirksville will take the samples of the lake tributaries, selected by the Department of Natural Resources.

determined as follows:

The woman walked with a limp in her right leg, which was determined from a sign of arthritis. The woman had very bad teeth, had been in ill health and had been buried in the nude about 10 years ago.

No signs of clothing were found with the bones, and the doctors reported that there would have been some sign of clothing remaining if she had been clothed when buried. The investigators believe the body had been wrapped in oilcloth, because some remains of such a cloth was found.

Violence was indicated by marks on the skull.

There was no indication that she had ever suffered malnutrition, and the doctors believe she was probably a member of the middle class, which they determined because her head was well shaped, indicating that she had been well cared for as a baby.

It was found that she had worn false teeth, probably since the age of 16. The upper plate was found in the skull.

The doctors believe she was stuffed in a wooden box, possibly a shipping crate. The investigation showed that the body would not have fit longways in the proportions of the parts of the box that was discovered with the bones.

The nails found in the box were not very old, indicating that the grave was not an old grave. A leaf discovered in the box indicated that she might have been buried in the fall of the year.

A bone in the left side of the temple was broken, which investigators said could have happened when she was stuffed in the box.

Marks on her arm could have been made by the lid of the box.

The skeleton was face down in the box when found, with the face toward the west.

They don't believe that the box with the body floated down the river because of the gumbo in which she was buried. They also believe that it was not a normal burial because the only known person buried in that area was a Negro male, to whom the investigators at first believed the bones belonged.

Since the skeleton was found, an inquiry has been made in the area to determine any possible missing person at the time she was apparently buried. Sheriff John Dennis, who was sheriff at that time, said he could recall no reports of missing persons.

Officials are now receiving calls from anyone who may be able to help identify her. It is not known if she was from this area or not.

Alabama gained 9½ points for its SEC basketball title tie with Vanderbilt. Vanderbilt won 10 points by taking the baseball crown but finished tenth and last in football, golf and tennis.

Wholesale prices zoom in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that wholesale prices increased by a whopping 3.9 per cent in August, raising the prospect that the nation's inflation is getting worse instead of better.

The increase was the second worst for any month in 28 years, exceeded only by a 6.2 per cent increase in August of last year after lifting of the government's freeze on prices.

Exploding prices ranged across almost the entire economy, with farm products and industrial commodities leading the way. The August increase works out to a staggering 46.8 per cent, if continued for a year.

Consumers could take no comfort that the big new surge in prices is at the wholesale level, since wholesale increases usually are quickly passed into retail prices, especially for food.

The big August increase also comes at a time when the Ford administration has suddenly stopped predicting there will be any significant decrease in the nation's inflation rate this year.

White House Economics Counselor Kenneth Rush told a newsman that the recent predictions that inflation might decline to about 8 per cent — from the current 11 per cent rate for consumer prices — probably will not be realized.

The August price rise followed an increase of 3.7 per cent in July. The Labor Department's Wholesale Price Index for August stood at 167.4 of the 1967 average and was 17.8 per cent higher than a year ago.

Translated into dollar figures, that meant that it cost $167.40 to purchase goods at wholesale that cost $100 in 1967.

All figures are adjusted to account for seasonal difference.

Detailing its price report, the Labor Department said agricultural products were up 7.6 per cent in August, following a rise of 6.4 per cent in July and a decline in each of the four preceding months.

Industrial commodities continued to rise rapidly in price and were up 2.5 per cent in August, a rate only slightly less than the average monthly increase of 2.7 per cent that has prevailed throughout most of the year.

Consumer finished goods, those products in the wholesale chain nearest retail outlets, rose two per cent.

Sharply higher prices for grains, livestock, oil seed and processed food and feeds accounted for much of the rise in agricultural prices last month. Processed foods and feeds were up 8.2 per cent while raw farm products rose 6.7 per cent to push over-all agricultural prices up 7.6 per cent at wholesale last month.

Shoppers can expect more price hikes ahead at supermarkets with the 3.2 per cent increase in consumer foods last month.

Consumer foods—those prepared for sale on grocery shelves—rose in price chiefly as a result of increases for meats, edible fats and oils, sugar products, processed poultry and eggs.

Some examples: meats, poultry and fish were up 1.5 per cent; processed fruits and vegetables were up 3.2 per cent; sugar products 9.6 per cent; animal fats and oils 23 per cent, and manufactured animal feeds 39 per cent.

Soaring prices for machinery and equipment, trucks, commercial furniture and railroad equipment accounted for the rise in producer finished goods.

Local officials ask why

75 companies looked, then bypassed Sikeston

About 75 companies have sent representatives to Sikeston this year to see if the city would make a good location for their business.

All 75 have bypassed the city, and at a meeting today with representatives of the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development, local officials wanted to know why.

Guy Jaffe, director of the CID Division, told the group one of the reasons he was in Sikeston today was to look at the city and see what can be done to help the city.

Jaffe; Scott Allen, deputy director of the CID; and Frank (Buz) Sutherland, community field representative for Southeast Missouri, sat in on a breakfast meeting with representatives of Sikeston, Miner, the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce and the Scott County Court.

Many industrial representatives have been enthusiastic about locating in the city while they were here, but their firms later have located plants in other towns.

Allen said it is difficult to determine why an industry locates where it does. He said firms seldom tell what went into making their decision.

One possible reason suggested at the meeting was the lack of a building available for immediate occupancy.

The only building in Sikeston suitable for industry is the building formerly occupied by Anchor Toy Co. on East Malone Avenue. However, the building is old and doesn't meet the needs of most companies looking to settle here, Allen said.

He said Sikeston needs a new building with about 100,000 square feet.

He pointed out that attracting industry is a very competitive business, and to be competitive, a city must have a building available for a prospective firm.

Every industry that has moved into the Malden Industrial Park moved there because a building was available, Allen added.

Jaffe said the city's designation as an economic growth center is designed to help both the city and state economies. Sikeston is one of 13 cities in the state named a growth center.

Woman, 78 found dead in Hayti

HAYTI — An elderly Hayti woman apparently killed herself early Tuesday morning by hanging herself with a rope tied to the stairway railing in the hall of her home, Pemiscot County Sheriff Thad Shelly said today.

The body of Mrs. Bonnie Jennings, 78, was discovered by her sister- in- law, Mrs. J. V. Oates of Blytheville, Ark., who called the sheriff's office around 8:40 a.m. Tuesday, Shelly said.

Mrs. Jennings had called her sister- in- law the night before and said she wanted to talk. When Mrs. Oates arrived at the home, Mrs. Jennings apparently had been dead about an hour.

Pemiscot County Coroner Jimmy Dean said death occurred sometime between 7 and 8 a.m.

Mrs. Jennings had been sick for quite a few years, the sheriff said, and left a note pinned to her housecoat explaining that she had been sick and could no longer take the suffering.

The body was taken to Jimmy Osborn Funeral Home in Hayti, where services were conducted at 3 p.m. Wednesday with Dr. Don Anright officiating.

Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery at Hayti.

She is survived by one brother, J. V. Oates of Blytheville, and one nephew.

Officials seek identity of woman's skeleton

An investigation by two Cape Girardeau doctors has uncovered many facts about the parts of a skeleton discovered March 7 two miles east of Illmo by Larry Morrill of Scott City. Officials are now seeking to determine the identity of the person whose remains were found.

The skeleton, which was determined to be that of a white female about 5 feet 2 inches tall, was found on the Mississippi River bank 150 yards north of Old Grays Point, which was formerly a landing for the Thebes, Ill ferry.

Morrill, who discovered the remains, was in that vicinity March 7 with a metal detector and came across the grave. He uncovered it and found parts of a human skeleton. After reportedly deciding it was an old grave, Morrill returned home, but got to thinking about it.

He then contacted Ralph Hayes, chief of police at Scott City, who, with Morrill, contacted the Scott County sheriff's department.

Deputy Sheriff Dave Sanders, Hayes and Morrill returned to the site, placed the bones in a plastic bag and took them to the crime laboratory at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau for possible identification.

Dr. Robert B. Briner of Cape Girardeau, director of the Southeast Missouri Regional Crime Laboratory, studied the bones for approximately two months with the late Dr. Gerald Thompson, professor of anthropology at SeMo State.

The 80 bones recovered were cleaned and determined to be from a human skeleton (there are 206 bones in the human body). Most of the recovered bones were from the skull.

From their investigation it was determined that the remains were that of a white female who was born in 1906 and buried in 1966.

Mrs Lowery posts bond

BENTON — Mrs. Nancy Lowery, 32, of rural Commerce, charged with first- degree murder in connection with the Sept. 1 shooting death of her 38- year- old husband, was released from custody Wednesday after posting bond of $5,000, which was set during Magistrate Court proceedings before Judge Lloyd Briggs.

Mrs. Lowery is charged with shooting James Lowery in the head with a single shot from a .22- caliber revolver while he was in bed asleep.

She told the Scott County sheriff's department the shooting followed a lengthy family quarrel.

In another case Wednesday, an attorney was appointed to defend Joe Garrett of Bell City on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident.

Sentencing was deferred one year for Rouget Gerald Delisle of Portageville, Billy Wayne Gibson of Rock Spring, Wyo., and Tharon Kennedy of Allenville on possession of marijuana charges.

A preliminary hearing was set on Sept. 25 for Larry Eugene Berry of Scott City. Berry is charged with tampering with a motor vehicle.

After pleading guilty to a nonsupport charge Jerry Cockrum of Dexter was given a 90- day suspended jail sentence and placed on two- year probation. One condition of his probation requires payment of $15 per week for child support.

Richard Forbey of Charleston was fined $150 on a driving while intoxicated charge.

David Sims of Sikeston was placed on probation after he pleaded guilty to two bad check charges. Sims

Lewises denied bond

BLOOMFIELD— Bond was denied Melvin Leon Lewis, 27, and his 26- year old wife, Judith Lewis, when they appeared before magistrate Judge Koss Bloemeyer for arraignment on three charges each of assault by fire this morning.

The charges stem from the death of three of their children, Melvin Leon Jr., 7, Jody, 6, and Mark, 5, who died in a fire that destroyed their rural home Aug. 1, 1973 near Essex.

Judge Bloemeyer denied bond on the pair until after their preliminary hearing that was set for Sept. 24.

Also charged in the case is David Larue, 40, of Gray Ridge, who is presently an inmate at the Missouri Department of Correction in Jefferson City.

Attorney expects murder warrant to be withdrawn

CORINTH, Miss. (AP) — The attorney for a Corinth physician said Wednesday he was prepared to offer witnesses to prove his client was in Mississippi when his divorced wife was slain in Missouri.

Attorney John Hopkins said however, he expected Missouri authorities to withdraw their first degree murder warrant issued against Dr.Norman Garrison Jr.

The warrant was issued by Dunklin County, Mo., prosecuting attorney Charles Baker after the bloodstained body of Mrs. Lee Ann Garrison was found in her Kennett, Mo., home early Sunday.

Hopkins said the warrant was never served on Garrison, but was returned to Missouri after authorities completed a preliminary investigation Tuesday.

"We have witnesses who will testify that Dr. Garrison was not in the state of Missouri during the past weekend," Hopkins said. "We will present those witnesses should Garrison be arrested and the Missouri authorities should institute extradition proceedings."

Hopkins said the warrant was issued against Garrison "almost immediately following his former wife's death.

"It appears obvious to me that the warrant was prematurely issued in that the investigation is being made after issuing the warrant rather than prior. I believe the facts will bear this out."

Garrison was arrested by federal agents on a warrant

A WRONG CHOICE?

The prediction that it would not be long before President Gerald R. Ford would run into controversy came true sooner than expected. Whatever else one may say of his nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as Vice President of the United States, "controversial" is a word that fits.

Three times Mr. Rockefeller actively campaigned for the highest office of the land; and on all three occasions, his bid for the Presidency was rejected. Clearly, Mr. Rockefeller was not the choice of the people, and there is no evidence to show that they would choose him now.

Millions of Americans breathed sighs of relief when Gerald Ford became President, because he was and is clearly a "man of the people." Raised in moderate circumstances, Gerald Ford can understand and appreciate the problems and concerns of the wage-earning American. Mr. Rockefeller, a man of high character and noble motives, is totally unable to conceive of what it means to live as an "average" American — because average he is not. Born into the billions of dollars controlled by the Rockefeller financial empire, Nelson Rockefeller will never know what it means to budget the family food supply, or to eke out enough savings to take a vacation, or buy an extra lamp for the house.

As with many millionaires who have inherited their wealth, Mr. Rockefeller displays what is known as a "liberal" bent, with a leaning towards what is sometimes called "social justice" but what others fear might better be defined as "social-ism."

The Rockefellers control vast holdings in banking, industry, raw materials, international finance and other areas of world and national economy. Even Rockefeller himself confesses that he does not know how far or wide his empire extends. How Congress is going to separate Mr. Rockefeller from "conflict of interest" in his proposed government office is difficult to see. For example, how many millions of dollars borrowed by the United States Government to support deficit spending comes from Rockefeller banking interests? And how many millions of dollars in interest to those banks is extracted from the American taxpayer? How much Rockefeller money is loaned to finance trade with the U.S.S.R.? It may be argued that Mr. Rockefeller will not know how various government policies affect the Rockefeller fortune; but his four brothers, one of whom heads the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, with over $20 billion in deposits and hundreds of employees on his payroll, will know. In a way, Mr. Rockefeller is not an individual, but an institution.

The record of the three generations of the Rockefeller dynasty shows that what has been good for the Rockefellers has not necessarily been good for others. At one point, in the 1870's, the Rockefellers controlled 95 percent of all the oil refining in the United States — to the detriment of other refiners. During the ten year period of 1962 to 1972, and while Nelson Rockefeller was Governor of the State of New York, there was a net increase of one and a half million in manufacturing jobs in the USA. While Texas gained 237,000 jobs, North Carolina 205,000, Tennessee 156,000, California 148,000, and so on, New York State showed a net loss in manufacturing jobs of 233,200, according to the U.S. Department of Labor. Whatever his economic policies, they didn't work out well for working people in that State.

These and undoubtedly many other questions are bound to be raised during the confirmation hearings. One wonders why President Ford did not nominate a less vulnerable target for opponents to shoot at.

EMPLOYMENT TREND CONTINUES UPWARD

Recent employment declines, concentrated in industries heavily dependent on fuel, have been offset by coninued growth in other industries, according to Commissioner of Labor Statistics Julius Shiskin.

Claiming that current unemployment stems largely from energy shortages, Mr. Shiskin said that "the end of the oil embargo has set in motion forces which may reverse the decline in employment in the energy-critical industries."

A recent Bureau of Labor Statistics study of 172 private nonfarm industries shows that employment dropped 0.3 per cent in "energy-critical" industries compared with a growth of 0.4 percent in other industries from NOvember 1973 through March 1974.

"Energy-critical" industries were defined as those likely to experience negative effects of energy shortages. They comprised 44 of the 172 industries studied, and represent 35 percent of private nonfarm employment.

During the four months covered in the study, employment dropped by some 150,000 to 225,000 workers in the critical industries directly affected by petroleum shortages, particularly gasoline service stations and airlines.

And I don't want to play in the sand any more. Let's go in the water." The boy said, "I don't have a bathing suit." "Neither do I. So let's just take off our clothes." They did and went paddling in the water. Suddenly she looked at him and said, "I didn't know Catholics were so different from Protestants."

ACTION NOW

Our elected representatives profess total and undying devoting to the cause of protecting the consumer and the environment. The voters of the U.S. should scrutinize and judge most carefully the manner in which their interests in these two areas are being handled.

In December, 1971, two decisions were handed down by the U.S. Districk Court for the District of Columbia changing the rules for power plants being built to handle increased demand for electricity. The Court invoked the Refuse Act of 1899 to prevent new power plants from using waterways to cool their turbine generators before completion of a detailed environmental review under the provisions of the National Environmental Policy Act.

Mr. Shearon Harris, chairman of Edison Electric Institute and chairman and president of a major electric company. siad, "As a result of these two court decisions, the critical situation of lack of electrical capacity will continue to develop unless the Congress acts promptly." He warned, "that unless needed generating facilities are permitted to operate, a slowdown in the economy and an increase in unemployment could result from the substantial load curtailments which are possible under the circumstances visualized."

Unless corrective action is taken by Congress, millions of Americans will face the possibility of electric power failures and major blackouts of an extent and seriousness not previously experienced. Legislation permitting operation of newly completed generating facilities, while environmental impact studies are made, is urgently needed. Anything less will jeopardize the adequacy of the nation's vital supply of electric energy.

INDUSTRY NEED THREE TRILLION IN CAPITAL BY '85

Chairman James J. Needham of the New York Stock Exchange warns that the corporations of America face a "staggering economic challenge" to raise the capital they will need to finance their growth in the years ahead.

Estimates of capital demand, he said, range up to $3.3 trillion by 1985.

"Enormous sums of investment capital will be required to finance growth, to correct the scarcities of basic materials that are leaving great gaps in our industrial capabilities, and to maintain a competitive international economic posture in the decade ahead," Mr. Needham said in a speech at a luncheon meeting of the Financial Executives Institute.

THE FIGHT AGAINST COMMUNISM GOES ON

Far from all of the citizens of our country are beguiled by the so- called "spirit of detente." This year's seventh annual awards presentation dinner of the Council Against Communist Aggression in Washington highlighted the necessity for continuing the struggle against the greatest threat free men and Christians have ever faced.

The Council's first award was presented to Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina for his steadfast denial "that the dictators who rule China and Russia with an iron hand are deserving of our admiration and trust" and for being the only Senator to oppose the confirmation of Henry Kissinger as Secretary of State because of objections to his "policies toward the communist dictatorships."

In his speech accepting the award, Senator Helms singled out the U. S. press as "perhaps most responsible for the cavalier attitude about communism being promoted today" and warned that national broadcasting networks are spreading the "lax moral standards" of New York and Hollywood throughout our country.

In a powerful and moving statement, a young black warrant officer, Donald J. Rander, who had suffered five years as a prisoner of the North Vietnamese, reminded the audience that communists are never to be trusted and called for rededication to a united fight against this enemy. He was accepting an award on behalf of a fellow ex- prisoner of war in North Vietnam, Michael Berge.

Awards were also given to Herbert Romerstein, chief investigator of the minority staff of the House Committee on Internal Security, and to a number of other active anti-communists. It is good to know that these resolute patriots are still keeping up their fight. HLH

Dear Gerry,

By the time you find this note I will be gone. I don't know how to tell you this, but the honeymoon is over. I guess I should have known it wouldn't last forever, but I didn't think it would end so soon.

How could you do it, Gerry? I believed everything you told me. We were so happy together, and I was so proud when people would point us out and giggle, "They're on their honeymoon."

What a glorious month we had. As far as I was concerned, you could do no wrong. I hung onto every word you said. After my bitter breakup with "you- know- who," I thought you were different. He lied to me and cheated on me and treated me like a fool.

I said I would never fall in love again. And then you came along with your honest face and strong- jaw and sincere smile and damned if my heart didn't go flip- flip.

I said to myself you were special. You knew right from wrong, and you would never be swayed by a lot of rhetoric and double talk. Gerry, you promised me you wouldn't do anything until justice took its course. You told me under the stars as we held hands that the long nightmare was over and we would love each other forever and ever.

Oh, Gerry, what made you change your mind? What happened to all those dreams you had for us?

I know you tried to explain it to me. You said you had to forgive "you- know- who" as an act of compassion because he had suffered enough. But he hasn't suffered half as much as we have, Gerry. We'll never know all the things he did to us. Even now he refuses to admit that he did anything wrong. He keeps talking about mistakes in judgment. They weren't mistakes in judgment, and you know it. They were criminal acts and you had no right to forgive him before we knew what they were.

I'm sorry I sound bitter, Gerry. I don't want to. I guess anyone who's been on a honeymoon and then discovers his mate is not a knight in shining armor would feel the same way.

Sunday, after you told me what you were going to do, I decided to go see Evel Knievel jump over the Snake River in his steam rocket. I thought this would make me forget. But it did just the opposite. As I stared at the red, white and blue Sky Cycle, I thought of us going off into space together.

I could see us flying across chasms and mountains sharing the danger and thrills that had been so much a part of our honeymoon.

But then as the rocket filled with hot air and the steam built up and the vehicle started lifting off the ramp, something happened. Before it got off, a parachute opened and, instead of streaking out across the canyon, the rocket nose- dived and floated head first, crash-landing on the rocky bank of the Snake River.

At that moment, Gerry, I broke into years. I wasn't crying for Evel-- I was crying for us. The rocket more than anything symbolized our honeymoon. It looked so beautiful on the pad with all that steam coming out of its nozzles, its nose pointed toward the sky as if to say, "Here I come world, ready or not."

The only trouble, Gerry, with Evel's rocket and your rocket on Sunday about "you-know- who" is that neither one of them would ever fly.--A.B.

P.S. Don't try to find me.

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:

Why Ford Did It

WASHINGTON — Special WAtergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski would have sought an indictment against former President Nixon "in a matter of weeks," according to sources familiar with the plans, if President Ford hadn't intervened with a pardon.

These sources say the special prosecutor intended to indict Nixon solely for obstruction of justice. Jaworski believed he had "an iron- clad case" against the former President and would get an "almost certain conviction," our sources report.

The case would have been based heavily upon Nixon's own tapes, which provide prima- facie evidence that he participated in the Watergate cover-up. Jaworski's deputy, James Neal, had already arranged for Secret Service technicians to testify about the taping system.

Our sources describe Jaworski as a man with a deep faith in the judicial processes. They say he simply could not ignore the verdict of the House Judiciary Committee, which voted unanimously to impeach Nixon for obstruction of justice, nor the will of the Watergate grand jury, which voted 19 to 0 to name him as an unindicted co- conspirator.

The grand jury would have indicted him last March if Jaworski had not counseled that a sitting President couldn't be legally indicted.

The threat of indictment hung over the former President like Damocles' sword. Sources who have had access to him in his seclusion at San Clemente describe him as "totally weary, terribly depressed and completely despondent."

One source has been struck by the "stark loneliness" of Richard Nixon. He is "absolutely alone within himself," the source explains. All sources agree that he has complete control of his faculties, although his conversation sometimes wonders and his nerves seem frayed.

Nixon's psyche is so "delicate," our sources report, that his loyal aide Ronald Ziegler and attorney Herbert "Jack" Miller took President Ford's representative, attorney Benton Becker, aside before putting him together with Nixon at San Clemente. They asked the judicious Becker to keep the meeting informal.

Becker refused to comment on the meeting, except to say he found Nixon "alert" and "cordial."

The main cause of Nixon's anguish, according to our sources, was the expectation that Jaworski would ask the grand jury to indict him. The distraught Nixon even developed a strange inability to repeat Jaworski's name.

In a phone conversation with Rep. Dan Kuykendall, R-Tenn., for example, the former President mumbled: "We've got problems with that fellow ... uh ... uh ..."

"Jaworski?" suggested Kuykendall.

"Yes," said Nixon.

Others have also reported that he seems to have trouble with the special prosecutor's name.

We have established that President Ford learned of Nixon's mental state and imminent indictment. White House sources say the President feared the indictment could cause his predecessor a nervous breakdown.

Here are the other reasons, which finally persuaded the President to move quickly to grant Nixon a "full, free- and absolute" pardon:

-- Ford's legal advisers, Philip Buchen and Benton Becker, determined that a pardon was the President's prerogative and had nothing to do with equal justice. Lyndon Johnson granted less than 200 pardons during his five years in the White House, for example, while Harry Truman issued about 200 pardons a year. People have been pardoned for crimes that kept others in prison. Buchen and Becker advised Ford, therefore, that the Nixon pardon would not affect the criminal cases against H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, John Mitchell and the other alleged conspirators.

-- The President's lawyers came up with a quote from Alexander Hamilton who, writing in The Federalist, declared: "There are critical moments when a well- timed offer of pardon to the insurgents or rebels may restore the tranquility of the commonwealth." Under the preamble to the Constitution, the lawyers noted, the President is required to "insure the domestic tranquility." Ford agreed that a pardon, in Nixon's case, would promote tranquility.

-- Buchen and Becker also contended there was no evidence Nixon had advance knowledge of the Watergate break- in. He was guilty merely of covering it up in order to avoid political embarrassment in the middle of the 1971 presidential campaign. What started out to be a political move wound up as a criminal conspiracy. The lawyers quoted from Sir Walter Scott's famous line, "Oh, what tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive!" Ford agreed that his predecessor hadn't started out to commit a crime but merely had become entangled in one.

-- The President and his advisers also took into account Nixon's 28 years of political service, the last 24 under a national microscope. As one aide mused, "This is a terrible way to go after such long service."

Inside Labor

by Victor Riesel

Labor Develops New Electronic 'Path' Strategy To Elect a 'People's Congress'

WASHINGTON--- Just the other day in his office (The Eighth Floor) across from the White House, labor chief George Meany said that the AFL- CIO has more political "clout" than ever in its history. And this is the result of having "a very, very effective political organization...we do have a machine...that reaches into the precincts of every industrial state in this country."

And when Meany, labor's chief of chiefs, says it's a machine, he certainly means it. I do believe it never has been matched in political history. During the next weeks, it will run the most electronicized election campaign any free nation ever has known.

According to a confidential packet of documents and two huge folding charts prepared for a special closed conference of COPE's Operating Committee (made available to me) labor's political- action strategists have developed new techniques under a hitherto unreported name and formula known by the code CPM.

The procedure, using computers all the way, is intended to saturate every state in a short time, reach down to every single union member, get his registration record, match it with the party in which he registered, if he did; determine whether he voted or not, print out his telephone number and union relationship-- and electronically give the Committee on Political Education directors access to every unionized working- class home in the land.

This futuristic politicking is called "the AFL- CIO National COPE Critical Path Method political procedures program."

In effect, it couples an electronically computerized "network" with hand- card selection, merging of political units, special budgeting of money and manpower in state after state. At least 13 states already are geared for action. They have deadlines for getting their members registered. They have alerts for unions and political action committees to tell them they are behind in view of primaries or the actual November balloting.

To describe the CPM's intricacies, the chart, the arrows and interlocking "boxes" and list each state would take several columns.

Today this "Critical Path Method" (CPM) is aimed at the November elections. It has devised its own enemies list in marginal states and regions. It appears to be able to forecast victories and defeats. For example, Meany said that noontime in his office that he would not (repeat not) be "greatly surprised" to lose to the Republicans the old Jerry Ford Grand Rapids, Mich., Fifth and the Ohio First Congressional Districts in the Cincinnati area this November.

Though the Path operation no longer calls for a "Veto-Proof Congress," it hasn't changed its objectives. Now it is driving for a "People's Congress" or "a pro- People Congress." There is no difference.

Point is to be able to override President Ford on labor's bills or those it supports. As a wise political scientist, Meany isn't tackling the President head- on in this campaign. For the labor chief it would be senseless. Eventually he may need the President politically. Meany and most of labor may find themselves unable to take the Democratic presidential nominee in 1976. And Meany already has indicated he believes that Sen. Ted Kennedy, were he nominated, would be defeated because of Chappaquiddick.

As for Sen. Scoop Jackson, those around Meany believe the Washingtonian has sacrificed much of the AFL-CIO support with his championing of Peking over Taiwan. And, says one close friend of Meany's, "Jackson is dead politically anyway. I believe George believes Jackson can't get off the ground, so why stay with a loser?"

So the COPE line now, according to the documents before me, is to say we'll support the new President and fight him only when we have to, but his conservative record discloses he'll not back our bills, so we need a people's Congress to override him when necessary.

But no disrespect is shown for the President. Part of the strategy is to campaign in each district where possible by saying such and such a Republican candidate is "Nixon's man."

And Path certainly can get into each district. As Meany said:

"We've a computerized voting registration list that reaches right down to the grass roots of our own membership."

As for financing, Meany, when asked about contributions to COPE, replied the money is "bigger than ever...Our voluntary contributions are up. I don't have the figures, but we did have a report the other day. We had a meeting of the Operating Committee of COPE (Aug. 26-28, as first revealed here-- VR) and we went down the line, and it was a plus all the way."

It was at this Operating Committee conference, attended by Meany personally, that the intricate Path packet was unveiled. Little was overlooked at the sessions. Representatives of organizations of youth, retirees, blacks and those of Latin- American descent, and women, as well as of labor, reported and participated actively. But the Critical Path Method electronic network chart was the most fascinating innovation created for the 1974 elections. Especially in the marginal district program section.

The Path electronically lights up the way to a People's Congress.

Lily Sadler weds Homer Henderson

BLOOMFIELD-- Mrs. Lily Sadler of Bloomfield and Homer Henderson of Dexter were united in marriage Sunday at First Missionary Baptist Church after the evening worship service. The Rev. Charles Hanna, pastor, officiated at the double- ring ceremony.

Mrs. Ivan Cooper, organist, played a medley of wedding music and the traditional marches. She also accompanied Mike Clippard who sang, "Oh, Perfect Love".

Mrs. Sadler chose an orchid, street- length, double knit dress for her wedding. She wore a corsage of red roses tied with a white ribbon bow.

Mrs. Richard King of Bloomfield, her matron of honor, was attired in an aqua double knit street length dress.

Gary Bridges, nephew of the groom, was best man.

Guests were invited to the church dining room for a reception following the wedding.

The bride's table was covered with an embossed silver and white spread. A three- tiered wedding cake centered the table, and punch was served from each end. Mrs. Bill Rickman and Mrs. Charles Hanna assisted in serving the guests.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Henderson live in Bloomfield.

Ann Landers

Ann observes treatment by acupuncture in China

Your Problem Girl is writing from behind the Bamboo Curtain, a member of the American Medical Association's delegation traveling through mainland China.

We are visiting Shanghai's largest hospital, where 2,000 outpatients are treated daily--about 500 with acupuncture. These people are not being operated on. They are receiving needles for everything from stuttering to bed- wetting to arthritis and cancer. After visiting hospitals in Peking, Shenyang, Darlien, and Tientsin, I've seen enough acupuncture so that I could set up a clinic and insert the needles personally. (If I lived in Nevada, it would be perfectly legal for me to do so. Heaven help us if other states pass such legislation!)

Dr. Don Wood, internist of Indianapolis, and Dr. Claude Welch, Harvard Prof. of Surgery and President of the American College of Surgeons, were busily photographing the acupuncture patients. Fourteen procedures were in progress in a single room. We were first shown a toddler with six needles protruding from his forehead. "He was brain-damaged at birth," the doctor said. His mother proudly boasted, "My son can walk a few steps now. When we carried him in he could barely move his little legs."

A nine- year- old girl was lying flat on her back with one needle in her lower abdomen and two needles in her ankles. "Frequent urination is her problem," the nurse told our urologists, Dr. Charles Hoffman of Huntington, W. Va., and Dr. Russell Roth of Erie, Penn. (both past presidents of A.M.A.). They winced.

A pretty 11- year- old child with epilepsy sat quietly with two needles in her elbows as we watched a nurse jab a third needle into her neck. "Does it hurt?" I asked. "No," she smiled. "It is making me well."

Dr. Jay Arena, the famous pediatrician, from Duke University, asked if the child was receiving any medication. (He thought she might be getting Dilantin, a drug which has proven very effective.) "No," was the reply. "She is doing well."

Dr. Kenneth Sawyer of Denver called my attention to a plumpish, middle- aged woman who sat quietly with two needles sticking out of her face, one at the corner of each eye. "Glaucoma," he said, as he reached for his camera. "I've got to get a picture of this one."

The most startling sight was a man in his mid- 50s, lying face down. He looked like a human porcupine with at least 30 needles protruding from his back and buttocks. Some of the needles were 12 inches long. "Arthritis," explained the doctor. "He will feel much better soon." Dr. James Sammons, Executive Vice President- Designate of the A.M.A., whispered to me, "No doubt. Just getting those damn needles out would help a lot."

As we left the ward, the patients applauded-- their customary manner of greeting foreign visitors and bidding them farewell. Joe Miller, A.M.A. staff member from Chicago, noted that not a single patient showed signs of discomfort. Moreover, they all seemed confident that the acupuncture treatments were helping.

At dinner that evening, our delegation discussed what we had seen. Dr. Malcolm Todd of Long Beach, Calif. (President of the A.M.A.) summed it up: "Acupuncture has been used for centuries to treat a wide range of complaints, but there is no scientific evidence that it has much value as a cure."

Dr. Richard Palmer, pathologist from Alexandria, Va., added, "Unfortunately, when people are in pain they'll try anything. We must make sure that acupuncture doesn't become quackupuncture. It must be regarded in the Western world as experimental and used only by licensed physicians, dentists, and research scientists." To which I added, "Amen, brothers."

Olivette to honor Brock

OLIVETTE, Mo. (AP) — Lou Brock's hometown of Olivette is planning a special day to honor the St. Louis Cardinal speedster.

Brock stole two bases last night at Busch Stadium, setting a major league season record of 105 and a National League career mark of 738.

And while the fleet outfielder was performing his base stealing heroics, the Olivette city council approved a resolution to honor him -- for his volunteer work in the community as well as his baseball feats.

Officials say they will try to hold the ceremonies on a Sunday in October.

SPORTS

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Spirits of St. Louis have announced a tentative agreement to sign James "Fly" Williams, former Austin Peay basketball star.

TWENTY YEARS LATER THE SPIRIT is just as strong as when Al Kaline began his big league career. The Detroit outfielder, who began his career with the Tigers in 1953, was recently awarded the "Mr. Enthusiasm" award by a Michigan booster club.

Correction

Socialist party will not have candidate on election ballot

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Socialist Workers party will not have a U.S. Senate candidate on the November election ballot in Missouri as the result of a state Supreme Court decision reaffirming the court's position that petition signers must be registered voters.

The court on July 22 ruled that signers of initiative and referendum petitions had to be registered voters.

Wednesday, the court denied a motion to rehear that case, but withdrew the decision and rewrote it to clarify the basis for its original order.

In addition, the court ruled that signers of petitions to get new political parties on the ballot must also be registered.

Losing the case was Barbara Mutnick, 29-year-old Socialist Workers' party candidate who was left off the ballot by Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick because only 6,722 of the signatures on her petitions were those of registered voters. She needed signatures of 17,844 registered voters.

"The decision makes it clear these is only one class of voters in the Missouri electoral system—registered voters—and the petition process is very much a part of that electoral system," Kirkpatrick said.

"Registration records are a valuable tool in canvassing petitions," he said. "With the help of county clerks and election boards, this year we were able to make the most thorough check of petitions this office has ever made.

"Limiting petition signing to registered voters is obviously not too severe a requirement, since one petition effort complied fully, winning a place on the ballot."

In both 6-1 decisions, Judge Robert Seiler dissented.

Mrs. Mutnick's attorneys contended the Constitution requires only that signatures be obtained from qualified voters, and that a person can be a qualified voter without registering, which they said was only a regulation pertaining to actually casting a ballot.

Judge Lawrence Holman quoted from an 1878 Supreme Court decision in a simular case in which the court said voter registration "was the final, qualifying act, and no matter if a citizen possessed every other qualification, if not registered, he was not a qualified voter."

Holman wrote the majority opinion.

The court has refused to consider an amendment by Sen. Donald Gralike, D-St. Louis, to the 1973 statewide voter registration law, in its decisions on petition signers.

However, Kirkpatrick based his position on the amendment, which said, "Whenever the word voter is used in the laws of this state, it shall mean registered, or legal voter."

Seiler said the decision placed registration requirements "upon statutes which do not deal with voting at all, but pertain exclusively to the signing of petitions."

He maintained that to require registration as a prerequisite to signing of petitions, the state constitutional requirement on petitions, or state laws on petitions, would have to be changed.

Mrs. Mutnick sais she will run as a write-in candidate.

In the revision of its decision on initiative and referendum petitions, the majority opinion said state law says any person may sign an initiative petition who is a qualified voter and who at the time it is presented to him is legally entitled to vote on the measure it proposes.

A person is legally entitled to vote when he meets the constitutional age and residency requirements and when he satisfies the requirements of state laws on voting, the opinion said.

Motor disability program begins

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- The Southeast Missouri Research Association for Specific Perceptual Motor Disabilities, Inc. began its fall program Saturday at the Hawthorne School.

The highly structured program, developed by Dr. Charles Shedd, Roading Reserarch Foundation, Lafayette, La., will meet from 7:45 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. each Saturday, with classes in auditory, reading, math, social values and motor skills.

The pupils are taught on a one-pupil, one-tutor basis, with each pupil working at his own rate of speed. The association was instituted in September 1973 for children with a learning disability, dyslexia and hyperactivity. The child must have an average or better intelligence with a breakdown in learning one or more subjects in a normal classroom.

The program began with an enrollment of eight and presently has an enrollment of 57. The students come from as far north as St. Genevieve, as far south as Sikeston, and from West Frankfort, Ill.

The past six months of testing showed an overall average gain in reading of two year six month. Testings ranged from one month to three years eight months.

Testing will be held again in mid-October.

For information on the program, contact Janice Meyr, P.C. Box 756, Cape Girardeau, Mo. 63701.

Anyone is welcome to visit and observe the classes on Saturday mornings.

Highway bill includes set speed limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nationwide highway speed limit would be set permanently at 55 miles per hour under a measure given 85-0 approval by the Senate.

The speed-limit provision was part of a highway bill okayed by the Senate on Wednesday and sent to the House.

The provision would make permanent a temporary 55 m.p.h. limit that was enacted in the midst of the energy crisis last winter but which is to expire June 30, 1975.

As in the temporary measure, the permanent limit would be enforced by cutting off federal highway aid to states that refused to set their limits at 55 m.p.h. or lower. Advocates said the reduced speeds have resulted in large savings of lives and gasoline.

The bill also would increase from 73,280 to 80,000 pounds the maximum allowable weight for vehicles on the Interstate highway system. Supporters said it would lead to more economical trucking operations, while the American Automobile Association denounced it as a hazard to motorists.

The Senate also went on record in favor of killing a requirement that cars be equipped with an interlock system to prevent them from starting before seat belts are fastened.

Senators adopted that amendment, 64 to 21, but the sponsors, Sens. James L. Buckley, Con-R-N.Y., and Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., then withdrew it.

The sponsors explained that elimination of the interlock devices, which became mandatory with 1974-model cars, was being considered in other legislation now in a Senate-House conference. But they said the vote showed the Senate's sentiment on the matter.

What's the law?

The case of the teeny crime

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Wilbur was so law- abiding he'd all but break out into a sprint whenever he saw a "No Loitering" sign. Consequently, he couldn't quite figure out where he'd gone wrong when a motorcycle cop flagged him down, on a hot and dry deserted highway and gave him a ticket for speeding.

Actually, it developed in court, bewildered Wilbur hadn't gone all that far wrong. The cop had ticketed him for going only 1 m.p.h. over the speed limit.

"I believe in law and order," Wilbur told the judge, "but I don't believe in that cop. He can't be for real. To give a man a ticket for going one measerly m.p.h. over the speed limit is an outrage. And, certainly, a person can't be convicted of such a teeny offense."

"Whether a man robs a big bank or a small one," responded the police officer, "it's still robbery. And whether a man exceeds the speed limit by one m.p.h. or 50 m.p.h., it's still speeding. Consequently, Wilbur's guilty and he's got to be punished."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you convict speeding Wilbur of breaking the law?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that considering that the road was dry and no other vehicles were in the area, Wilbur's exceeding the speed limit by one m.p.h. was not so unreasonable as to warrant his conviction.

(Based upon a 1963 Ohio Supreme Court Decision)

The petroleum exporting countries are doling out money as carefully as they did oil during the embargo, but there are signs the United States won't get cut off this time.

The oil exporting nations made billions of dollars from the four-fold increase in petroleum prices and, in most cases, their economies can absorb but a fraction of the earnings. Most are holding on to surplus revenues, putting it in a safe and ready sugar bowl: short-term bank desposits of no more than 90 days.

But some money is going to help the less developed nations and to purchase arms. Small amounts are being spent on real estate and business investments.

The United States government and American businessmen have been seeking a share of the oil money. Last weekend, there was an indication of partial success: financial sources said that Saudi Arabia had decided to purchase several billion dollars of a special bond issue by the U.S. Treasury.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon visited the Mideast this summer, trying to convince Saudia Arabia and Kuwait to buy a large quantity of the special treasury bonds. He proposed that Saudi Arabia buy "well in excess of $5 billion."

The exact amount and terms of the Saudi Arabian purchase have not been decided on, but a Saudi financial official said the figure would be less than Simon wanted.

In addition to the special bond deal, Treasury officials say that oil producing countries have bought the bulk of between $4 billion and $5 billion worth of other Treasury and government securities sold to foreign countries this year.

By the end of this year, the 10 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are expected to have $60 billion more than they need. The World Bank calculated that the surplus would grow to more than a trillion dollars by 1985. That's almost 10 times the amount the United States has invested abroad.

The non-Arab countries — Iran, Venezuela, Indonesia and Nigeria — have larger populations or more sophisticated economies which can soak up most of their money. Even those countries will have excess cash for temporary investments while they wait for projects to come off the drawing boards.

Where is oil money going?

Bankers, realtors and others in the financial community are reluctant to talk for attribution. They say they are afraid that pending deals could fall through and possible future transactions might be jeopardized. Some pieces can be put together. Among them:

—An offer from Kuwait to pay almost $250 million for the St. Martin's Property Corp., a British real estate group. Kuwait already owns 8 per cent of the company.

—An half-interest by the Kuwait Investment Co. in a $100 million Atlanta hotel-commercial complex.

—The purchase by the Kuwait Investment Co. of Kiawah Island off the South Carolina coast for $17.4 million.

—An offer from Iran to loan money to Grumman Corp. to assure production of the F14 Navy fighter plane.

—The purchase by Iran of $3.5 billion worth of U.S. military equipment and $4 billion worth of French industrial goods.

—The purchase by Iran of 25 per cent of the steel subsidary of West Germany's Krupp industrial enterprise for $100 million.

London bankers said that large amounts of oil money in short-term bank deposits had been withdrawn from Great Britain and shifted to New York because of the weak British economy. They declined to give figures.

New York financial experts also refused to provide many specifics. But the New York Federal Reserve Bank, which compiles figures on the holdings of the 12 largest New York banks, said the oil countries were responsible for a recent $300 million increase in the time deposits that the banks hold for foreign nations.

Fruits and vegetables, as they ripen, tend to increase in water content. An apple seed, only 10 per cent water, will produce a ripe apple that is 80 per cent water. A ripe pineapple is 87 per cent water, a tomato is 95 per cent, and a watermelon is 97 per cent water.

On the other hand, a herring is 67 per cent water, a chicken 75 per cent, a frog 78 per cent, a lobster 79 per cent, an earthworm 80 per cent, and man has 70 per cent of his body weight in water.

Water is as vital as the air we breathe, yet we are careless with it. We pollute and waste it. By the time it reaches our homes, it contains every chemical and compound known to man. It is no longer the clean, fresh water that forms in the clouds.

Enjoy the best — try refined water. It's like drinking from a fresh mountain stream. For a home demonstration call Braswell.

The program is designed to make it easier to channel state aid to the city and promote its economic growth.

As the growth centers expand, they will help the surrounding area expand, Jaffe stated.

He said the concept of economic growth centers came about after the state discovered there was no plan for state development. "The ones who screamed the loudest got the most money," he said.

He said the program is designed to channel limited state resources into the areas where they will do the most good.

"The personal inputs we receive from community leaders and other information we gain from tours such as this will give us the kind of guidance we need to make sound decisions as to how our economic development efforts on the state level should be directed for maximum benefit to all Missouri communities," Jaffe said.

Sutherland, a former Charleston resident, is the CID Division's new full- time community development field representative for Southeast Missouri.

"Buz's job will be to represent the division of community development and explain its community development assistance programs," Jaffe said. "He will work closely with local leaders in this area to assist them in reaching community goals."

Sutherland said he was pleased with his new assignment to Southeast Missouri because it would allow him to carry on his community development work in the area where he grew up. Previously, he worked as a community betterment specialist in Southwest Missouri.

charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. He appeared before U.S. Magistrate William P. Dodson Monday night was freed on $10,000 bond.

Hopkins said the Missouri authorities had initiated the FBI action by informing a U.S. attorney in St. Louis that they feared the physician would attempt to leave Mississippi.

"This was totally untrue," Hopkins said. "There are two dozen witnesses who will testify he was never far away from his residence. They could not conceivably be any plausable reason why Missouri authorities felt this was necessary.

"They did not have the evidence to arrest Dr. Garrison but they wanted to confine him to Mississippi, have him in custody, so they could interrogate him."

Hopkins said Missouri authorities joined state and local officers and conducted "a thorough investigation in Corinth ending late Tuesday afternoon."

Authorities in Kennett said Mrs. Garrison, 32, was beaten with a blunt instrument then shot once in the head. They said her body was discovered by her teen-age daughter.

The Garrison were divorced in June and their three children had been living with their father.

Garrison was facing contempt of court charges in Dunklin Court for alleged nonpayment of alimony and failure to return the children to Mrs. Garrison in July as required by the divorce ruling. Mrs. Garrison was awarded $10,000 in alimony by the divorce court.

Lions dedicated to serving humanity

Lionism means asking what the local community needs that the Lions Club can provide – and then working to provide it, Lions District Gov. M. G. Lorberg Jr. of Cape Girardeau told Sikeston Lions Club members at a special meeting Wednesday night at Sikeston Country Club.

Lorberg is head of the department of speech at Southeast Missouri State University and governor of District 26 D which comprises most of Southeast Missouri.

Lorberg said World Lions Service Day is coming up in October and each club throughout the world will be asked to "do something for humanity that day." He suggested that Lions could collect old eye glasses or eye donor cards.

Imagine the impact, he told the club, if all Lions spent part of the day in service to the community. Lions International is the largest service club in the world, Lorberg said, including 17,000 Lions in Missouri.

Lions International is well known for its work in the area of sight conservation.

The Sikeston club membership of 41 is slightly larger than the average club, Lorberg said, but could be larger. He pointed out that

M. G. Lorberg

Kennett has a club with 100 members.

He suggested that the club needs to recruit younger members and give them a say in running the club. Too often the older members do everything, he said.

Lorberg said the state club would again sponsor a Missouri Lions band to perform at the next international convention to be held in Dallas.

The Missouri clubs sponsored a band this summer at the international convention in San Francisco.

Kansas City lawyer named bar president

Arthur H. Stroup

ST. LOUIS– Arthur H. Stoup, a Kansas City attorney, was named president of The Missouri Bar at the 95th annual meeting of the organization which began Wednesday at Stouffer's Riverfront Inn.

He succeeds Robert L. Hawkins Jr. of Jefferson City as president of the 9,000-member organization of Missouri lawyers and judges.

Stoup is senior partner in the Kansas City law firm of Stoup and Bohm. He is a past president of the Kansas City Bar Association and has served as a member of the board of governors of The Missouri Bar since 1967. He is also a member of the Lawyers Association of Kansas City, Missouri Association of Trial Attorneys and American Bar Association.

The new bar president received his degree from University of Missouri- Kansas City and served as an instructor in its department of history and political science prior to receiving his law degree from the UMKC School of Law. He was admitted to the Bar in 1950.

In addition to his many activities in legal organizations, Stoup is active in civic affairs. He is a past president of the Ward Parkway Optimist Club (1961- 1962) and served as Distinguished Lt. Governor of Optimist International, Missouri District (1963- 1964). He is a member of the board of governors of the Florence Crittenton Home and the Missouri Republican Club and the board of trustees of the Law Foundation of University of Missouri- Kansas City.

Prior to his election as president, Stoup served as vice president of The Missouri Bar in 1972- 73 and as president-elect in 1973- 74.

William J. Tate, a St. Louis attorney, succeeded Stoup in the office of president elect, and Thomas D. Cochran of St. Louis was named to succeed Tate as vice president.

Board members elected to serve as members of the executive committee for one-year terms were: Don Mason of Kansas City, Robert Hetlage of St. Louis, David Donnelly of Lebanon, Wade F. Baker of Jefferson City, Robert L. Hawkins Jr. of Jefferson City, the immediate past president, and the three new officers.

Officer foils burglary

HAYTI-- An off- duty Sikeston police officer foiled three would- be burglars at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday by interrupting their attempt to burglarize the Federal Compress and Warehouse Co. offices in Hayti.

Robert Parr, the Sikeston policeman, noticed three male youths inside the offices while walking down the street and called the Pemiscot County Sheriff's office, which contacted Hayti police.

Parr held the youths— aged 15, 16 and 17— in the offices until Hayti police officers Bill Hopkins and Ed Hendrix arrived and made the actual arrests.

The boys were turned over to the Pemiscot County juvenile officer.

Guard to test for pollution

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri National Guard, in conjunction with the state Department of Natural Resources and the Federal Environment Protection Agency, will begin sampling seven lakes in southern Missouri to determine chemical pollution content, state and federal officials jointly announced today.

The year-long sampling program, set to begin this weekend, is aimed at determining the extent of phosphate and nitrate deterioration in water quality of the lakes, Robert R. Payne of the EPA told newsmen.

About 75 guardsmen, working on a weekend volunteer basis, will take monthly samples from 59 tributaries of the Clearwater Reservoir, Pomme de Terre Reservoir, Stockton Reservoir, Table Rock Reservoir, Lake Taneycomo, Thomas Hill Reservoir and Lake Wappapello.

The EPA, Payne said, already has taken three samples from the main lake areas, beginning last March, and will take a final sample next month.

Following the collection of the water samples and their analysis Payne said the state will be provided with the findings upon which it can base application for federal assistance.

National Guard units from Springfield, Monett, Fredericktown, Poplar Bluff, Moberly and Kirksville will take the samples of the lake tributaries, selected by the Department of Natural Resources.

TENNIS STAR AT USAF

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — In his three years as the No. 1 singles tennis player at the Air Force Academy, team captain Alex Parsons of Denver compiled a 51-17 record. This year, Parsons won 19 of 22 singles matches.

determined as follows:

The woman walked with a limp in her right leg, which was determined from a sign of arthritis. The woman had very bad teeth, had been in ill health and had been buried in the nude about 10 years ago.

No signs of clothing were found with the bones, and the doctors reported that there would have been some sign of clothing remaining if she had been clothed when buried. The investigators believe the body had been wrapped in oilcloth, because some remains of such a cloth was found.

Violence was indicated by marks on the skull.

There was no indication that she had ever suffered malnutrition, and the doctors believe she was probably a member of the middle class, which they determined because her head was well shaped, indicating that she had been well cared for as a baby.

It was found that she had worn false teeth, probably since the age of 16. The upper plate was found in the skull.

The doctors believe she was stuffed in a wooden box, possibly a shipping crate. The investigation showed that the body would not have fit longways in the proportions of the parts of the box that was discovered with the bones.

The nails found in the box were not very old, indicating that the grave was not an old grave. A leaf discovered in the box indicated that she might have been buried in the fall of the year.

A bone in the left side of the temple was broken, which investigators said could have happened when she was stuffed in the box.

Marks on her arm could have been made by the lid of the box.

The skeleton was face down in the box when found, with the face toward the west.

They don't believe that the box with the body floated down the river because of the gumbo in which she was buried. They also believe that it was not a normal burial because the only known person buried in that area was a Negro male, to whom the investigators at first believed the bones belonged.

Since the skeleton was found, an inquiry has been made in the area to determine any possible missing person at the time she was apparently buried. Sheriff John Dennis, who was sheriff at that time, said he could recall no reports of missing persons.

Officials are now receiving calls from anyone who may be able to help identify her. It is not known if she was from this area or not.

Alabama gained 9½ points for its SEC basketball title tie with Vanderbilt. Vanderbilt won 10 points by taking the baseball crown but finished tenth and last in football, golf and tennis.
